HUBERT VAN DER GOES.

- 106 THE STEM OF JESSE. St. Anne seated on a throne in a crimson drapery and white head-dress, her hand resting on the shoulder of the Virgin, who is seated at her feet nursing the Infant, who is holding a rosary ; David holding a harp on the left, and Solomon on the right, holding a sceptre ; a donor kneeling in prayer on either side : sixteen half-length figures of patriarchs, apostles, and evangelists spring from flowers on the branches of a tree, which springs from the back of the throne of St. Anne, with gold background

The background was blue till 1857, when Dr. Waagen discovered the gold beneath it, and advised the removal of the surface colour.

640. 10. = "This is the finest work I have seen by that unknown master who painted the Baptism of Christ in the collection of the Academy at Bruges, there wrongly ascribed to Memling. We thus see this subject of the Stem of Jesse, which was so popular in the middle ages, here once more repeated towards the termination of that period, with some arbitrary alterations, it is true, but with the purest and most elevated religious feeling at the same time ; the heads, though somewhat similar in character, display a degree of beauty, and the hands and cast of the drapery a knowledge which is quite astonishing. The head of St. John the Evangelist, one of the half-figures, is especially of the rarest delicacy ; although the colouring of the flesh and drapery is cool, yet a refined harmony pervades the whole picture. The superiority of the drawing and the greater delicacy with which every portion is rendered, prove that this picture was executed somewhat later than that in Bruges."—WAAGEN.
